

Digital Citizen Project

This Libraries NI project will tackle the serious digital skills deficit in Northern Ireland by delivering digital learning opportunities across the Libraries NI network and in community settings.

Digital skills are necessary life skills, and these will become even more important in the future as so many everyday activities – such as shopping, banking, communicating, accessing services, advice and information - go online.

The project aims to take away the fear factor and help people to get online and stay connected through safe use of the internet.

The project will target people living in rural and neighbourhood renewal areas.

Digital literacy is every bit as important as the ability to read and write.

The project can be delivered through group sessions, short learning programmes and one-to-one sessions to suit the needs of the learners. The service is free and we want to talk to you about what you feel your needs are and how we can help you!

The Digital Citizen Project is funded by Department for Communities.
